Abstract - This paper presents an analysis of the metaphorical concept 'FINANCE IS PLANT' in Vietnamese online newspaper from the perspective of Cognitive Linguistics. The study employed the conceptual metaphor theory in cognitive linguistics, using descriptive and semantic analysis methods, as well as statistical and classification techniques to establish and analyze the mapping from the source domain of PLANT to the target domain of FINANCE. A total of 110 metaphorical expressions in Vietnamese were examined, revealing three lower cognitive models: "Human activities for plant are human activities for finance", "The situation of finances is the situation of plants" and "Finance is the name of the Plant". The study's findings present valuable insights for the teaching, learning, and translation of conceptual metaphors, contributing to the enhancement of communication skills for Vietnamese English learners.

1. Introduction

The grounding of metaphors lies in our basic experiences, with one of the most fundamental being agriculture. Plants we cultivate fulfill essential needs such as shelter, food, medicines, and clothing. All aspects of human existence, both merits and demerits, can be discerned in plants. In English, cognitive linguistics analyzes various metaphors stemming from this experience. Lakoff and Johnson [1, p. 47] explore the 'IDEAS ARE PLANTS' metaphor, while Kövecses [4, p.98-101] delves into 'COMPLEX ABSTRACT SYSTEMS ARE PLANTS'. Finance, a complex abstract system, can be seen as a derivative metaphor under 'FINANCE IS PLANT,' derived from 'COMPLEX ABSTRACT SYSTEMS ARE PLANTS.' Plant metaphors have been extensively studied in literature and various life aspects throughout history. A study by Nguyen Thi Loc in 2023 focuses on the 'CONCEPTUAL METAPHOR OF CATEGORY INDICATING PLANTS IN THICH NHAT HANH'S PROSE' [2]. While prior studies touch upon the metaphor 'a woman as a plant' [3], there is a gap in examining 'FINANCE IS PLANT' from a cognitive linguistics perspective. This study aims to fill that gap by providing an analysis of this conceptual metaphor.

The objective of the paper is to use cognitive linguistic theory as a basis for understanding how finance is conceptualized and expressed in Vietnamese.

To fulfill the purpose of the study, he survey was seeking to answer the following research questions:

metaphor "FINANCE IS PLANT" in Vietnamese online newspapers?

2. What meanings are conveyed through the use of these conceptual metaphors?

This paper aims to explore the conceptual metaphor of Finance within the Vietnamese language. It analyzes the mapping from the source domain PLANT to the target domain FINANCE.

1.1. Literature review

The paper is situated within the framework of Conceptual Metaphor Theory, as advocated by cognitive linguists (e.g., Lakoff and Johnson [1]; Kövecses [4]). According to this theory, metaphor constitutes a set of cross-domain mappings between two conceptual domains known as the target and the source domain. In contrast to traditional views of metaphor that treated it solely as a linguistic phenomenon, cognitive linguists emphasize that metaphors are conceptual structures and not solely linguistic in nature, although they are predominantly expressed linguistically.

From this cognitive perspective, metaphor has evolved into an essential conceptual tool, and a fundamental tenet of Conceptual Metaphor Theory asserts that metaphor primarily pertains to thought, not just language. Our language is rooted in the way we conceptualize things, grounded in our bodily experiences and culture. As articulated by Lakoff and Johnson [1, p. 3], "Our ordinary conceptual system, in terms of which we both think and act, is fundamentally metaphorical in nature." Metaphor involves the mapping or projection from concrete concepts to abstract ones. Through this process, human beings structure concepts and gain knowledge about the world around them. According to Kövecses [4, p.4], metaphor is defined as understanding one conceptual domain in terms of another conceptual domain. In the conceptual metaphor "FINANCE IS PLANT," PLANT serves as the source domain, and FINANCE is the target domain. For instance, the language expression "Hết thời hái ra tiền, thu nhập giảm mạnh, nhiều tài xế xe ôm công nghệ bỏ nghề" (The time of making a packet is over, income has sharply decreased, many technology-based motorbike taxi drivers are quitting their profession) is a metaphorical expression where "harvest" describes the financial activity, illustrating the metaphorical connection between PLANT and FINANCE. This metaphorical expression will be the focus of our paper as we aim to elucidate and clarify its nuances.

1.2. Finance and Plant

Finance is indispensable in human life, playing a crucial role in facilitating economic activities, aiding individuals in achieving financial goals, and assisting businesses in strategic decision-making. Whether in personal budgeting or corporate investments, finance is pervasive, influencing every aspect of our lives. Its effective functioning ensures economic stability, growth, and resource optimization, making it an essential tool for individuals, businesses, and societies. Encompassing the management of money, assets, and capital, finance serves as the lifeblood of economic systems, driving growth and innovation.

The Oxford Advanced Dictionary [5] defines a plant as a living thing that grows on the earth and usually has a stem, leaves, and roots, especially one that is smaller than a tree or bush. Similarly, The Cambridge Dictionary [6] defines a plant as a living thing that grows in the earth, in water, or on other plants, usually having a stem, leaves, roots, and flowers, and producing seeds.

The category of "plant" can be observed in smaller metaphorical groups and suggests five common plant attributes typical of the source domain [7, p.65-89]. In this study, to explain the attributes of the concept of the source domain as plants, the author divided the term "plants" into three main groups. (1) Those that indicate the characteristics and properties of plants (dry, fresh, ripe, silky, etc.); (2) Those that describe the biological activity of plants (budding, blossoming, flowering, blooming, etc.); (3) Those that refer to human activities affecting plants (sowing, harvesting, yielding, planting, cultivating, etc.).

As finance facilitates stability, growth, and resource optimization in human societies, plants, with stems, leaves, and roots, play a parallel role in Earth's ecosystem. The effective function of both finance and plants is crucial for the overall well-being of individuals and societies.

1.3. Methods

To meet the research criteria, the author gathered samples of 110 Vietnamese articles sourced from various websites and reliable online newspapers, including Dan Tri, Nhan Dan, Thanh Nien, Tuoi Tre, and Tien Phong, among others.

The investigation into the conceptual metaphor "finance is plant" was conducted within the theoretical framework of cognitive linguistics. The analysis employed a combination of descriptive and semantic analysis methods, complemented by the application of statistical analysis and classification techniques. The author identified metaphorical samples using the Metaphor Identification Procedure (MIP) proposed by the Pragglejaz Group [8]. This procedure consisted of four steps: (i) Reading to comprehend the content related to finance; (ii) identifying words/phrases describing or relating to plants; (iii) examining the words preceding and following them to determine if they carried any figurative meaning, as opposed to their literal meaning; (iv) if so, considering them metaphorical expressions. This study employed a descriptive approach to analyze, classify, and identify implicit meanings. Statistical and inference methods were applied to identify the source and target domains projected onto each other, creating implicit cognitive structures related to finance. Through these methods, the paper presents discussions on the implicit cognitive structures associated with finance that were identified.

The content of the collected English language expressions does not have a translation into Vietnamese. Therefore, the English examples in the article are translated by the author based on the context of each text.

2. Results/Findings and Discussion

The Mapping structure between the two domains of Finance and Plant is displayed in Table 1 below:

Table 1. Mapping structure of Conceptual metaphor FINANCE IS PLANT

SOURCE: PLANT	Mapped onto	TARGET: FINANCE
Gaining returns after careful cultivation	→	Reaping the benefits of wise investments or financial activities
Collecting ripe fruits or crops	→	The accumulation of wealth through financial management
Plants are readily available for growth and development	→	Money that is readily available, liquid, and not tied up in long-term investments or debts
Vegetation that lacks moisture, vitality, or sustenance	→	Stagnant funds, lacking investment, growth, or any form of financial activity
Leaves or fruits dropping from trees	→	A decline or reduction in the value of financial assets
Rice	→	Money

In the mapping process, distinct attributes from the source domain are activated and subsequently projected onto the target domain, adhering to the principle of partial mapping. The target domain, embodied by the recipient 'Finance,' selectively assimilates specific attributes from the source domain, thereby acquiring characteristics associated with the source domain of 'Plant.' Statistical data on metaphorical expressions within the conceptual metaphor "FINANCE IS PLANT," establishing a connection between these two conceptual domains, can be visually represented through the concept of 'finance as plant,' as outlined in Table 2 below.

Table 2. Metaphorical Expression Statistics of Conceptual Metaphor FINANCE IS PLANT

The shared attributes between the source and target domains	Metaphorical expressions	No. of appearances
rapid and effective resource acquisition	Gieo (sow)	11
	Hái (harvest)	24
vitality and depletion	Khô (dry)	5
	Roi rụng (fall)	10
	Tươi (fresh)	20
	Sinh sôi (grow)	10
	Nảy nở (blossom)	10
sustaining life	Thóc (rice)	20

Based on the statistical data of metaphorical expressions for the conceptual metaphor "FINANCE IS PLANT" presented in Table 1, the paper established the cognitive metaphor models for Finance, with the source domain being Plant, as follows:

Table 3. The cognitive metaphor models of "finance is plant"

Cognitive metaphor models	Number of expressions	Frequency	Total number of metaphorical expressions
Human activities for money are human activities for plant	2	35	110
The situation of finances is the situation of plants	5	55
Finance is the name of plant	1	20

The conceptual metaphor "finance is plant" involves a collection of corresponding mappings from the source domain of PLANT to the target domain of FINANCE. Drawing from the textual source, we synthesized and categorized 110 metaphorical expressions into three low-level cognitive models: (1) Human activities for money are human activities for plant; (2) The situation of finances is the situation of plants; (3) Finance is the name of plant. The target concepts within these models include money, capital, asset, wallet, among others. The most prominent model is "The situation of finance is the situation of plant" (55 occurrences), followed by "Human activities for money are human activities for plants" (50 occurrences), and "Finance is the name of plant" (20 occurrences).

2.1. Conceptual metaphor "Human activities for money are human activities for plant"

(1) Lào Cai: Người phụ nữ vùng cao "gieo tiền tỷ" (Lào Cai: Woman in the highlands "sows billions") (32)

"Gieo" refers to the initial act of planting seeds or initiating a process. When applied to plants, it's about planting seeds in the soil, while in the context of money, it signifies initiating financial investments or endeavors aimed at yielding profits. By drawing on these shared attributes between agricultural cultivation and financial activities, the metaphor effectively conveys the idea of engaging in activities that have the potential to yield significant financial returns through careful investment and nurturing, much like tending to a crop.

(2) Những công việc "hái" ra tiền lúc nông nhàn (Jobs that "make a packet" during agricultural leisure time) (1)

In the literal sense, "hái" means to harvest, which is an agricultural activity associated with collecting ripe crops or fruits from plants. Here, "hái ra tiền" metaphorically means engaging in activities that yield financial benefits, similar to the harvest in agriculture yielding a valuable crop. The metaphor "hái" is used to draw a parallel between the act of harvesting in agriculture and engaging in financially rewarding activities. It conveys a positive connotation, suggesting that there are lucrative endeavors one can undertake during opportune times, akin to reaping the benefits of a successful harvest.

2.2. Conceptual metaphor "The situation of finances is the situation of Plants"

(3) Tiền tươi mới cirus được bắt đồng sản (Fresh capital alone can rescue the real estate market) (51)

In the context of plants, "tươi" (fresh) suggests vigor, vitality, and the state of being healthy and alive. Similarly, in the financial domain, "tiền tươi" (fresh money) conveys the idea of money that is readily available, liquid, and not tied up in long-term investments or debts. Just as plants need fresh nutrients and water to grow and thrive, businesses and investments require fresh funds or capital injections to sustain or revive them. "Tiền tươi" implies a source of funds that can inject new life or growth into a financial endeavor. Fresh plants are readily available for growth and development, and fresh money is readily available for financial transactions or investments. "Tiền tươi" indicates money that is easily accessible and can be quickly deployed for various purposes, such as saving or rescuing real estate in the example provided. By employing the metaphor of "tươi" (freshness), the writer enhances the understanding of the financial context, highlighting the importance of readily available funds in addressing financial challenges or opportunities, akin to the vitality and growth potential associated with fresh plants.

(4) Nước cạn, doanh nghiệp thủy điện 'khô' tiền, từng lãi trăm tỉ nay chỉ còn vài trăm triệu (The water is dry, hydropower enterprises are running out of money, once a profit of hundreds of billions is now only a few hundred million) (36)

In the metaphor, the attribute of "khô" (dry) is transferred from the original domain of "state of plants" to the new domain of "Features of money" or financial condition. The correlation lies in the common experience of dryness representing a state of depletion or inadequacy, whether in the context of plants lacking water or a business lacking funds. The correlation between the two domains is based on the shared human experience of understanding dryness as a negative state. The metaphor relies on the common knowledge that just as plants wither and struggle without water, a business faces financial hardship when its monetary resources dry up. In summary, the metaphor "khô" in this context successfully transfers the attribute from the realm of plant life to the financial domain, emphasizing the dire financial situation of the hydropower business by drawing on the shared experiential understanding of dryness as a state of deficiency.

(5) Những nhà đầu tư không bán kịp phải dở khóc dở cười khi nhìn tài sản rơi rụng mỗi ngày (Investors who failed to sell their assets in time neither laugh nor cry when seeing the assets gradually fall everyday) (41)

In the context of plants, "roi rụng" (falling) refers to the natural process of shedding leaves or fruits, often indicating the end of a growth cycle or seasonal decline. Similarly, in the financial domain, "tài sản rơi rụng" signifies the loss or decline in the value of financial assets, such as stocks, real estate, or investments. Just as plants may shed leaves or fruits in response to environmental factors or stressors, financial assets may experience declines due to market volatility, economic downturns, or poor investment decisions. The metaphor suggests a sense of instability and vulnerability in both contexts, where assets are subject to external forces beyond the investor's control. Witnessing the shedding of leaves or fruits can evoke emotional responses such as sadness or frustration in the context of plants. Similarly, experiencing losses in financial assets can evoke similar emotions, leading investors to feel disappointed, helpless, or regretful, as reflected in the phrase "phai dở khóc dở cười" (neither laugh nor cry). By employing the metaphor of "roi rụng", the writer vividly captures the experience of financial loss and decline, evoking imagery of natural processes and their emotional impact.

(6) Để tiền 'sinh sôi' trong hợp đồng bảo hiểm (To make money 'grow' in the insurance contract) (71)

In the domain of plants, "sinh sôi" describes the process of germination and growth. It signifies the vitality and flourishing of plants, suggesting a dynamic and positive transformation. The metaphor suggests that, similar to the way plants grow and thrive, money within the insurance contract undergoes a positive, dynamic process of development. The transfer involves associating the concept of growth, vitality, and positive transformation from the domain of plant growth to the increase in income sources within the financial context. In summary, the transfer of the "sinh sôi" attribute from the domain of the growth of plants to the increase in income sources in an insurance contract involves associating the positive, dynamic process of germination and growth with the growth and thriving of money within the financial context. The metaphor emphasizes the idea that the money within the insurance contract has the potential to grow and develop, similar to the way plants germinate and flourish.

(7) Tài sản giới tý phú Mỹ vẫn 'nảy nở' trong 2 tháng phong tỏa chống dịch Covid-19 (the assets of American billionaires continues to 'blossom' during the 2-month lockdown against the Covid-19 pandemic) (81)

In the context of plants, "nảy nở" implies vigorous growth, new shoots or buds emerging, and overall expansion. Similarly, in the financial domain, "tài sản 'nảy nở'" suggests the continued growth and expansion of wealth or financial assets, despite challenging circumstances such as a pandemic-induced lockdown. Just as plants may continue to grow and flourish even in adverse conditions, the assets of billionaires "nảy nở" during the COVID-19 lockdown period indicate resilience and adaptability in the face of economic disruptions. The metaphor suggests that wealthy individuals are adept at navigating financial markets and seizing growth opportunities, regardless of external challenges. Sprouting plants often seize growth opportunities and compete for resources in their environment. Similarly, the metaphor implies that wealthy individuals capitalize on market dynamics or economic conditions to expand their wealth and financial portfolios, leveraging their resources and expertise to their advantage. By employing the metaphor of "nảy nở", the writer underscores the resilience and success of American billionaires amid the COVID-19 lockdown, using imagery that conveys growth, expansion, and adaptability. This metaphorical shift enriches the language by portraying financial success as analogous to natural growth processes, highlighting the ability of wealthy individuals to thrive even in challenging times.

2.3. Conceptual metaphor “Finance is the name of plant”

(8) Lúc tôi về Hà Nội, thời buổi kinh tế khó khăn, trò tăng thầy khi là bịch mì chính, khi là bịch gạo 5kg. Dần dần, các thứ đó công kèn quá, cái gì cũng được quy ra "thóc" (When I returned to Hanoi during the difficult economic times, gifts to teachers ranged from a packet of instant noodles to a 5kg bag of rice. Gradually, these items became cumbersome, and everything was reduced to paddy/rice in the husk) (98)

In the provided example, "thóc" is used as a metaphor to represent the concept of finance. This metaphorical usage transfers the meaning of "thóc," which refers to the name of a plant (paddy or rice) to the realm of finance. In agriculture, "thóc" symbolizes the primary food source and a source of livelihood. Similarly, in finance, money holds significant value and is essential for survival and growth. By using these shared attributes between the domain of agriculture (specifically rice cultivation) and finance, the metaphorical usage of "thóc" effectively transfers the meaning from the tangible concept of rice to the abstract concept of finance. It allows the speaker to convey the idea of reducing complex economic matters to a simpler, more relatable concept, making it easier for the audience to grasp the message.

(9) Người Việt lười đọc sách, cái gì cũng "quy ra thóc" (The Vietnamese people are lazy to read books; They tend to convert everything into paddy/rice in the husk) (92)

In terms of metaphor, "thóc" is originally associated with the domain of agriculture, particularly the name of a plant (rice). Rice is a fundamental component of the Vietnamese diet and holds cultural significance. The correlation between the name of the plant (rice) and money may stem from the essential role both play in sustaining life. Rice is a basic food staple, while money is a fundamental aspect of practical living.

3. Conclusion

The findings presented in this paper demonstrate that metaphor is an integral part of our understanding of financial concepts and that the conceptualization of finance through the metaphor "FINANCE IS PLANT" is systematic in Vietnamese. As discussed, we have identified five conceptual mappings that the analyzed metaphor relies on, with each of these mappings instantiated by various conceptual expressions. In particular, we have shown that several characteristics specific to plants are metaphorically transferred into the domain of FINANCE. Examining the metaphorical concept of "FINANCE IS PLANT," we have provided additional evidence to clarify the metaphor of the concept of PLANT in Vietnamese. In the conceptual metaphors of finance, the fundamental attributes of the PLANT domain are mapped onto the FINANCE target domain. Utilizing a collected sample of 110 metaphorical expressions of finance with the plant domain, this paper has established, described, and analyzed three lower metaphorical models, including (1) human activities for plant are human activities for finance (35 occurrences); (2) The situation of finances is the situation of plants (55 occurrences); and (3) finance is the name of the plant (20 occurrences). From this analysis, we observe the prevalence and tendency to use plant-related words to describe financial issues in economic discourse, providing insight into the Vietnamese perspective on finance. It is anticipated that the achieved results will contribute to further illuminating the cognitive foundations and processes involved in perceiving the world for Vietnamese speakers.
